Information you need

You may eat and drink normally.

You may experience some abdominal pain following your investigation. This is usually due to air in the lower bowel put in during the procedure. These symptoms usually settle after 12 - 24 hours. If the abdominal pain is severe or lasting longer than 24 hours you should contact your General Practitioner (GP) or go to the nearest emergency department. Please take the copy of your report with you.

Important Information following Banding of Haemorrhoids.

Banding is usually a day procedure, without the need for an anaesthetic, and most people can return to their normal activities the next day. You may feel pain (which may be severe) or discomfort for a day or two. Normal painkillers are usually effective, but your General Practitioner can prescribe something stronger, if needed.

Directly after the procedure, you may notice blood on the toilet paper after having your bowels open. This is normal, but there should not be a lot of bleeding. You may continue to have some bleeding for up to 14 days after the banding, this may get worse at 7-10 days after banding when the haemorrhoid falls off. If you are worried about the bleeding or if you pass a lot of bright red blood or blood clots (solid lumps of blood), go to your nearest accident and Emergency (ED) Department immediately.

Please take the copy of the report with you.

You may not realise that your haemorrhoids have fallen off, as they should pass out of your body when you go to the toilet.

Please avoid using creams or applicators directly into the anus after your treatment.

You may shower or bath as normal.
